France's Still Born Government

PARIS, June 8.—The new French political Cabinet named to-day by M. Francois Marsal, to take the place of that headed by M. Poincare which recently resigned, is as follows:—Premier and Minister of Finance, M. Francois Marsal; Foreign Affairs, Edmond LeFebvre Du Prey; Justice, Senator Antoine Ruteur; Interior, Justin De Sevelles; War and Pensions, Andre Maginot; Labor and Hygiene, Paul Jourdain; Navy, Desire Ferry; Public Works, Yessel Trocquer; Education, M. Landy; Commerce, Pierre Flandin; Agriculture, M. Capus; Devastated Regions, Louis Marin; Colonies, Jean Fabry. The Ministry was made known after a final interview between President Millerand and M. Francois Marsal. It will make its appearance before Parliament on Tuesday, when the Premier will read a message from President Millerand in the Chamber explaining the political situation as the President sees it. Simultaneously the Minister of Justice will perform a similar duty in the Senate. The initial appearance of the Cabinet before the Chamber is likewise likely to prove its farewell. The general impression is that France which has been without a responsible Government since June 1st, will have one Tuesday, but only for a few hours. The Francois Marsal Cabinet has already been referred to by its friends as an "evanescent cabinet" while the Opposition has dubbed it "the still born government." So certain is everybody who concerns himself with politics that the message from the President, the delivery of which to the parliament is the sole purpose of its formation, will find the Government in a minority upon the first vote.

Millerand Claims Attitude Justified

PARIS, June 7.—The Governmental deadlock continues but there was evidence this morning that President Millerand who has been withholding his hand thus far would take action this evening and name a Premier after consulting M. Steeg and a few other political leaders. According to those near him the President is convinced that he has lost nothing by being deliberate inasmuch as his resistance to the interdict of the Left has been approved by steadily growing sections of Parliamentary opinion.

Death Roll Placed at Fourteen

WILKESBARRE, Pa., June 8.—Fourteen dead have been established as the total of the gas explosion on Friday at the Loomis Colliery of the Alcon Coal Co. Two men are in hospital seriously injured, while four or five slightly hurt are at their homes.

LATEST

NEW YORK, June 9.—For the first time since he became an avowed candidate for Democratic nomination for President, Governor Alfred E. Smith yesterday expressed himself in favor of revision of the Volstead Act to allow the States so inclined to legalize the sale of light wines and beers. He said he believed the Ku Klux Klan to be "contrary to the very principles on which this country was founded."

HONG KONG, June 9.—Three United States Army planes, which are on a world flight, arrived here from Amoy at 12.30 yesterday afternoon, having made the 390 mile flight in three hours and fifteen minutes.

LONDON, June 9.—In a speech at Belfast on Saturday, Lord Carson, one of the leaders in the Ulster Opposition to Free State dominance in Ireland, said he had been told there was to be a number of different appointments from far ends of the British colonies to try to settle what was called the Irish Boundary question. 'Twas a remarkable situation and one he regretted. He was disappointed that the British Government could not get anyone in the United Kingdom, and that it was necessary to go to Timbuctoo or some other place to find somebody to solve a knotty problem.

LONDON, June 9.—Anti-American at Imperial Hotel in Tokio has focused attention afresh on immigration trouble and comment of morning newspapers in tinctured with anxiety. Morning Post expresses sympathy with both Americans and Japanese. Daily Telegraph says incident in Tokio added to general and increasing anxiety in diplomatic circles and expresses fear over outcome.

RAGOON, British India, June 9.—Portuguese aviators Pieuts, Paes and Seiros, who arrived here from Akayb Friday hopped off today for Bangkok.

PARIS, June 9.—"Ministry of a message" is one of the names given to Cabinet formed by M. Francois Marsal, inasmuch as 'twas constituted primarily to lay before Parliament President Millerand's message explaining political situation as he sees it and allowing new majority of left to go on record against him if it chooses, in which case he will resign.

YOUTHFUL MURDER CONFESES CRIME

CHICAGO, June 8.—All blame for the murder of Robert Franks is placed upon Nathan Leopold, Jr., by his former pal, Richard Loeb, in a confession made by the latter to State Attorney Crowe a week ago and made public on Saturday. "I want to say that I offer no excuse. If it was not for the suggestion and stimulus of Leopold the Crime would not have been committed," Loeb said in ending his confession.

Jury Disagrees in Montreal Murder Case

MONTREAL, June 7.—The jury in the trial of Giuseppe Serafini, charged with the murder of Henrie Cleroux, Bank of Hochelaga messenger in the Bank car hold-up, April 1st, reported a disagreement this morning seven being for a verdict of murder and five for a verdict of manslaughter. Serafini will be tried again at the September sessions of the court. The trial of others arrested in connection with the hold-up will proceed Monday.

Empire Dis-agreement On Lausanne Treaty

LONDON, June 8.—The debate in the House of Commons on the Lausanne Treaty matter and the relation of the Dominions thereto will have done good, the Manchester Guardian says. If it leads to an overhauling of the machinery required for the unification of the entire policy. The Guardian commenting on Premier Mac Donald's suggestion that if Great Britain were to engage in further negotiations involving either the honour or resources of the Empire these should be made the subject of very careful enquiry by constitutional representatives of Dominions as well as of Great Britain, says: "In this particular case (signing of the Lausanne Treaty) which has not the support of all the dominions, an examination of the rapid fire cablegrams between London and Ottawa indicate that neither Great Britain nor Canada is altogether blameless. It clearly would have been better for the Home Government then and there to have discovered what the Canadian reservations in the signing of the Treaty implied. It is equally clear the Canadian Government might have volunteered more details in explanation."

Length of Man's Life 400 Years

Interesting View of London Doctor on Longevity Prospects.

While some doctors say there is no reason why we should not live to 120, Dr. J. H. Christopherson, assistant physician to the City of London Hospital, says in the Lancet that it is difficult, if not impossible, to determine the potential longevity of man or the higher animals. Dr. Christopherson writes: "Practically speaking, little is known of the potential longevity of the higher animals. But it has been found that the bilharzia worm, living under ideal conditions in the human body, may live at least 28 years. This worm is common in Egypt, and enters the body in drinking water. While in the body it lays eggs, but these to develop must pass through some other charge. In one case an English doctor contracted bilharzia on the Zambesi in 1873. Twenty-eight years after his return to England the worms were still alive. In their free state they would live only 28 hours."

"The conclusion from this," said a biologist, "is that man might live 300 or 400 or even 1,000 years if he could be preserved from all harmful external conditions."

CHAPTER I

"How pretty you are, Jess! I am so sorry for you!"

"Don't be," said Jess, almost fiercely. "And yet I pity myself. Think of it! Three terms! And I don't know whether I shall go away these holidays."

"Doesn't your father write?"

Jess shook her head.

"No. Sometimes I think that he has quite forgotten that he has got a daughter. But don't blame him, Polly. He has been very unfortunate. He is very poor. I suppose in his struggle with the world he hasn't time to think of me."

Polly munched her raspberry tart, and gazed sympathetically at the graceful figure and beautiful, sombre face.

"I suppose he doesn't have me home because he cannot afford it. I don't suppose he has paid for me all these three terms, and I wonder—bitterly—that Miss Shaddock doesn't turn me adrift. I ought to be grateful to her for keeping me here; but I know that she does so because I'm good at French and music, and I come out well at the examinations. I'm a kind of advertisement for her. Sometimes I wish she would send me away; then my father would have to remember that he had a daughter, and I should go and live with him. I'd rather live on a crust of bread and a glass of water, and struggle, out in the world there, than stay here, living on Miss Shaddock's charity."

"Perhaps he'll pay presently," suggested Polly.

"I don't know anything of his affairs," said Jess, "or what he does. I believe he's something on the Stock Exchange. I've never seen much of him. My mother died when I was quite a little thing; I can just remember her. Then I was sent to a school—before this one—and only went home for the holidays. We lived in Camden Town—quite a poor part of London."

Polly Baker looked wonderingly at her. Polly was the daughter of a flourishing M.P., went home in the holidays to a big house, had plenty of pocket money, and a host of friends.

"Poor Jess!" she murmured. "Jess, will you come home with me? I'm sure my mother would be glad to have you, and we will have the nicest time! Do!"

Jess shook her head. "I shouldn't like to. Besides, I haven't anything to go in. This, and my black merino dress I wear on Sundays, are the only decent dresses I've got—if you can call them decent. No, I shall go down to the seaside, with Miss Shaddock, as usual, and long for the holidays to be over, that I may get back to you and some others I like."

"But—pleaded Polly."

Jess slid off the desk and took up her pen again.

"Don't say another word," she said almost fiercely. "And don't tell the girls what I've told you; though I can trust you. But perhaps they know already. Miss Shaddock isn't above telling them. Give me the blotting paper, and don't say another word, or I shall hate myself for having told you!"

Polly obeyed. She always did what Jess told her. Jess scribbled rapidly, then pushed the exercise book to Polly.

"There; you're only to write ten lines!"

She finished her own task, rose and left the schoolroom, and went into the playground. She went to a quiet corner, coiled herself up, and, leaning her head against the wall, closed her eyes.

But she was not sleeping. She was thinking of the father who had forgotten her, and left her to the tender mercies of Miss Shaddock's charity. The world seemed very hard to Jess that afternoon, and, in the dark clouds that surrounded her young life, she saw no rift. And yet the rift was there, and the sun was beginning to shine through it. A mite of a child, the youngest of the school came up to her presently. She had a book in her hand, and looked sad and troubled.

"Are you asleep, Jess?"

"Yes," said Jess, opening her eyes. "Fast. What is it?"

"I can't do my lesson. Won't you help me, Jess?"

Jess took the book and the child coiled up beside her.

"How clever you are, Jess!" she said admiringly, as Jess explained away the difficulty. "Will you let me kiss you?"

Jess bent her head. There was a sudden moisture in her eyes.

"There, run away, now; you'll get full marks to-morrow."

The wistfully counted days wore on, and the breaking-up night arrived. On these occasions Miss Shaddock asked the parents, and the nobility and gentry around Minerva House to witness the attainments of her scholars, and to drink port-negus and eat sandwiches and buns.

At this entertainment, Jess shone conspicuously.

The girls were all proud of her, and it was Jess's one hour of triumph in her dreary school life. When this term was over the girls rushed away as usual to their dormitories, to pack their boxes. Jess did not pack hers. She had not heard from her father; Miss Shaddock had not said anything of her going home. She saw nothing before her but the dreary, silent schoolhouse, and the still more dreary visit to the seaside, in company with the woman who disliked her, and who kept her, so to speak, in pawn.

In the morning the bus left amid much laughter and excitement, and Miss Shaddock, after waving her handkerchief, and smiling sourly at the departing throng, turned to Jess, with no trace of the smile left.

"You had better go to your room, and read some improving book, Miss Newton; the mind should never be allowed to remain idle."

As Jess turned, with a lump in her throat, the postman entered the hall and handed Miss Shaddock a letter. She opened it, and read it, then glanced at Jess with a peculiar and surprised expression.

"One moment, Miss Newton," she called after her. "This is a letter from your father. He wishes you to go home. There will be just time for you to catch the train; but you must be quick, my dear child."

Jess could scarcely believe her ears. Then she bounded upstairs, tore off her shabby school dress, put on her scarcely worn and less shabby black merino, bundled her few things into a well-worn and battered box, put on her hat and jacket, and went down into the hall again. Miss Shaddock was waiting for her, with actually a smile on her face.

"Are these your best things, my dear?" she said.

"Yes," replied Jess.

Miss Shaddock bit her lip.

"Tell your father, my dear," she said, "that I was just about to order you some new things—in fact, the patterns came this morning. I hope you've made a good breakfast. Martha is putting up a lunch for you, for you have a long journey before you."

"Where am I going?" asked Jess.

"To Ravenhurst," replied Miss Shaddock. "It is in Leamshire. You will change at Byford, and reach Ravenhurst about five o'clock; your father will meet you. Will you have anything before you go?"

Jess shook her head.

"Are you sure, quite sure, dear? Give me your best regards to your father, and tell him that I am exceedingly pleased with your conduct and that I trust he will find you have made great progress in your studies. I shall miss you very much indeed these holidays, dear; and I hope your father will think you are looking well, and that I have taken care of you. I had intended giving you a prize last night, but the stupid bookseller sent a volume short; however, I will send it on to you by post."

The fly drove up and Jess got in.

"You've forgotten to kiss me, dear," said Miss Shaddock, poking her head in at the window. Jess leaned forward; Miss Shaddock dubbed her on the cheek.

"You will be sure to give my very best regards to your father?"

Jess nodded; she was incapable of speech. Miss Shaddock put some money into her hand, the shabby box was thrown up beside the driver, and the fly rumbled away.

Jess looked back at the hateful house, with its ugly stuccoed front and bare windows, then leaned back in a kind of stupor. But presently she began to realize that she was indeed going home. But to Ravenhurst! Why Ravenhurst, and not Camden town? Perhaps her father had got a situation there? He had evidently sent Miss Shaddock money; for Jess knew that nothing else could account for that lady's sudden and extraordinary affection.

She reached the station wondering still and half inclined to believe she was dreaming, and asked for a ticket for Ravenhurst.

Passengers were hurrying to the train, the time was up, and the guard was raising his whistle to his lips, when Jess saw a gentleman strolling slowly up the platform. He was a tall young man, well dressed, and with an air of serenity and self-possession which the fact that the time was up, and the guard on the point of giving the signal for starting did not appear on the point of giving the signal for starting did not appear in the least to disturb. He sauntered along with a cigar between his lips, and his eyes half-closed, and when the guard said:

"Time's up, sir!" he nodded cheerfully, and looked back to a plainly dressed man who was following him with a bag, an overcoat, and a case of fishing rods.

Jess heard the guard swear and mutter in a half good-natured way:

"He's always late, and he don't care a blow how long he keeps the train!"

Then, aloud, he said, as he opened the door of Jess's carriage. "Here you are, my lord. But you want a smoking?"

The gentleman threw his cigar away.

"This will do," he said; and he got in. The man who had followed handed in a bag and the overcoat, touched his hat and got into a second-class compartment lower down.

"All right, my lord?" asked the guard.

Jess liked round the carriage with a sense of comfort and luxury. It was the first time she travelled first class, and the padded cushions seemed delightfully comfortable.

When they reached Byford Junction, the guard came to the door.

"Change here, my lord," he said.

The gentleman said "Confound it!" under his breath, and looked as if he didn't mean to move; but he got out presently, and followed Jess into carriage of the other train, and, having bought a pile of papers and magazines, leaned back in his corner and closed his eyes again.

Jess looked at him. She saw that he was young and very handsome. He was tall and broad-shouldered, and looked even to her inexperienced eyes, like a soldier. There was a scar just above the left temple, and she wondered whether he had got it in battle.

There was something about him, an indefinable something, which attracted Jess, and made her wonder who he was; and she was still looking at him when he opened his eyes so suddenly that Jess, though not without possession, colored slightly, and looked aside.

He stroked his mustache, and glanced at her in a half-critical, half-indolent way, then reached for the pile of magazines, and holding them out to her he said:

"Would you like to look at some of these?"

Jess thanked him, and selected one. He took the others and turned them over lazily.

"Almost too hot to read!" he said.

"Yes," said Jess.

The sun was streaming through the window full onto her young and bewitching face.

The Battalion were engaged in Company drill under their Company Officers on Thursday night. Total on parade 159. The usual routine was pursued. The Colonel was on duty until 9 p.m. when he left to attend the War Veterans Conference for the purpose of finalizing details in connection with Earl Haig's visit. The C. L. B. Cadets will take great pleasure in honouring one of England's greatest soldiers, who has favoured Britain's Oldest Colony in coming to unveil her National War Memorial on the King's Bench. Orders announce that Armourer Sergt. Adams has been given three months leave of absence. Captain P. B. Rendell is also on leave and is going to Halifax and Nova Scotia cities for a three weeks' holiday. He sails Saturday by the Rosalind. All ranks will be glad to see him safe back again on duty. Meantime bon voyage, Captain Phil!

The W.O.'s and N.C.O.'s are having a Ciderella Dance in the Gymnasium Monday night at nine. Their lady friends are looking after the refreshments and Captain Sandy Morris promises the latest music. The Committee all say it's going to be a jolly time. Corporal Whitten is busy selling tickets.

Some members of the Sergeants Mess are lost, stolen or strayed from Battalion Headquarters. They were last seen in company with some fascinating companions strolling down the streets. A reward has been offered for their delivery to the Armoury on Battalion night.

Lieut. M. Job Taylor was on duty Tuesday till 3 p.m. when he was given leave on account of an indisposition. The lads of his Company missed him.

Grand Falls Company reports for May with a total of 69 on the strength. A stage attendance of 40. A church parade was held May 25 with 63 all ranks answering the roll call. The Girl Guides Company and their officers also joined with the C. L. B. Captain Harold C. Hayward paraded with this company also at the 11 a.m. service. The Rector, Rev. T. C. Loder, preached. Major Windeler, O.C. in command. The Company's Bugle Band paraded their marching music. Grand Falls has a splendid building for an armoury. It is used by the C.L.B. Cadets, Girl Guides and Scouts. Captain Cooper, Adj. informs St. John's Headquarters that this Company expects to send a goodly number to Topsail Camp 24th of July.

Trinity East, Port Rexton Company

reports 40 on the roll for May. Lieut. Ploughman and Lance Corp. Fowlow are on leave visiting St. John's. The former had the pleasure of visiting the Armoury and meeting the Officers. Sixteen new recruits have enlisted during May—a jolly good sign! Private Graham Day and James Hogarth have been appointed Acting Lance Corporals. Platoons are being arranged into sections by Captain C. T. Fitzgerald, M.D., Officer Commanding, which is a move in the right direction. Port Rexton-Trinity East Company honoured themselves and the flag on Empire Day by a Memorial Service as a reminder of the gallant heroes of Trinity district who gave their lives for their King and Country. Speeches were made and flag saluted and in the afternoon the first Outdoor C. L. B. Sports were held, which were a great success, and the Company's finances were benefited thereby. Captain Fitzgerald, O.C. is certainly doing great work and his Company is rapidly getting into its stride!

Portugal Cove Company is swinging rapidly into line. News from there is good. Empire night was also celebrated there by the Company's first indoor sports. These were arranged by Captain Sheppard, O.C. The Rector, Rev. Andrew Tulk, B.A., Chaplain, opened the programme with an address on Character Building, and the war records of Portugal Cove lads, and the great success of Brigade life. The sports followed, including an exhibition of horizontal bar work and a cavalry tournament. Other items were high jumps, three legged racing, egg and spoon race, tug of war, potato race, back to back race, wheel-barrow race, wrestling exhibition, boxing and pyramids. Quite an up to date programme! After Captain Sheppard, O.C. thanked the spectators for their kindly interest and support of the Company the National Anthem concluded a pleasant evening and a fitting Empire Day commemoration. On Sunday May 25, the Bishop of Newfoundland and Reginald Chaplain visited the Parish to hold Confirmation. The C.L.B. provided a Guard of Honour also a squad which pulled His Lordship's carriage to the Rectory. Many of the Portugal Cove Company lads were confirmed whilst wearing their uniform. May they continue to always uphold the Brigade's motto of "Fight the Good Fight."

On Monday, May 26, the Company held their first social dance in aid of funds. It was most enjoyable and well attended. All Empire Day celebrations were splendidly arranged and the social side netted seventy five dollars to their funds. Captain Sheppard's Company will be well represented in Topsail Camp by a well drilled section of lads.

Our London Brigade magazine pays a fine tribute to the Newfoundland Regiment C.L.B. in May issue. It refers to "the medical examinations of recruits by the M. O. Staff Surgeon, Captain Burden at Headquarters St. John's." London Headquarters says "this is a most valuable example which might well be copied throughout the C. L. B. all over the Empire. Carry on Doctor Burden, your kindly tips on health to the boys is appreciated and a stitch in time saves nine! This is a great work and the time is well spent, and your Medical Department thus leads the way to London Headquarters Staff in recommending that your example be emulated all around the Empire where the Brigade endeavours to maintain its motto of "Fighting the Good Fight."

CAPT. J. A. FARQUHAR'S ROMANTIC CAREER.

The London, England, Evening News recently had the following interesting interview with Capt. J. A. Farquhar, head of the Farquhar Trading Co., North Sydney, and of Farquhar & Co. Halifax, who returned to his home in Halifax last week from an extended trip abroad. Says the News:

Life is Captain J. A. Farquhar, one of Canada's oldest shipmasters, has known it, has been no tame affair. It has included—

A boyhood spent on Sable Island, "the graveyard of the Atlantic."

Many a rough passage in a wind-jammer;

Descents to the depths of the sea to save mails and bullion; and Seal-hunting on the ice-floes of Newfoundland.

Captain Farquhar, who at 82 is president of two steamship companies whose vessels sail out of Halifax, Nova Scotia, as well as head of a big supply stores, is now staying at the Charing Cross Hotel on his return from the Riviera. He is sailing for home on Saturday.

To an Evening News representative he told the story of his adventurous career today.

"Sable Island, which lies off the south-east coast of Nova Scotia, was named the 'Graveyard of the Atlantic' owing to the large number of wrecks which happen there," he said.

"I was taken there by my parents when I was six, and as there are no schools on the island I never had any schooling. But when my day's work was done I had to get my books and learn off my lesson before I went to bed. My mother saw to that.

"In my early days in the 'Graveyard'—about 1849 it would be—the only rescue appliances we had were a few surfboats, but some years later an American woman named Miss Dix came to the island.

"While she was there a wreck occurred, an she was so impressed by the distressing scene that on her return home she presented the island rescue station with two lifeboats, a gun for signalling, and a rocket apparatus. Since then two lighthouses have been built and further life-saving appliances procured.

"For fourteen years I worked at the rescue station. Then I shipped before the mast on a sailing ship.

"My first long voyage was on the Emerald Isle, an old Liverpool packet trading between New York and San Francisco.

"There was no Panama Canal in those days, of course. We had to go round Cape Horn, and it was pretty rough. The trip took 143 days."

Eventually, after much experience before the mast—in the course of which he was once shipwrecked—A. B. Farquhar took his master's ticket, and became Captain Farquhar of the Cumberland, a full-rigged sealing ship.

A few years later he "went into steam" and inaugurated Canada's first steam and seal fishery.

"There was plenty of excitement about that," he said. "It was the young seals we were after. We used to land on the ice-floes and catch them. But sometimes the parent seals objected and showed fight. It was exciting, but I liked it."

During one period in his career Captain Farquhar was employed in salvage work. He raised the guns from the Nobe, a naval screw sloop which was lost off the Newfoundland coast, and delivered them to the naval authorities at Halifax.

"Another salvage job I remember well," he said, "was that of the Hamburg-America packet Germania, 50 years ago. She was wrecked off the Newfoundland coast with a quantity of bullion on board—Mexican dollars and pigs' of silver."

She lay in about eight fathoms of water and had to go down to the second or third deck, smash open the mail room, and secure the mails and treasure."

At 82 Captain Farquhar has no thought of retiring.

British Aid For Ruhr Lock-Out

(London Daily Herald)

One of the important matters to be discussed at the national delegate conference of the Miners' Federation of Great Britain to-morrow, is the situation arising from the lock-out of the German miners in the Ruhr.

Mr. A. J. Cook, secretary of the M. F. G. B., told me yesterday that the position demanded immediate consideration, especially by the British miners in the export districts.

"If the German miners get beaten on the question of an extension of the working day," he said, "it will certainly affect the miners in this country. I hope that the British miners will do all that is possible to prevent the lengthening of the German miners' working day."

M. F. G. B. MUST GIVE AID

"We, as a federation, will have to give financial assistance. The whole situation is very serious, inasmuch as we have struggled to maintain the seven-hour day, and have resisted the repeated attacks of the owners on this point, and the German miners' struggle is one that applies equally to us. If they are beaten our seven-hour day will be imperilled."

"I hope that as a result of the report that will be made to the delegates, they will rally to their German comrades."

Mr. Cook and the officials of the Federation will be present at the meeting of the International Federation of Trade Unions, at Vienna, on Sunday, when the Ruhr situation will be discussed by the secretariat of the Miners' International and the other secretariats with the Management Committee of the International Federation.

Mr. Robert Williams, secretary of the National Transport Workers' Federation, whose members would be involved in any trade union action taken to support the Ruhr miners, and who will also be attending the meeting at Vienna, expressed strongly the view that "any success that the Ger-

PART OF CAPITALIST PLAN.

"It is all a part of the capitalist drive to force down wages and conditions," said Mr. Williams. "In 1920 the European capitalists attacked on a charge of shooting Samuel wages, and as a result British workers have been compelled to suffer wage cuts, so that they can compete with Sunday morning. Her counsel asked for a week's adjournment and she was held without bail."

"The German miners had to accept a lower standard, and as a consequence all other workers in Western Europe suffered the same fate, especially in the 'unsheltered' trades of engineering, mining and textiles. Toronto Girl on Charge of Murder

NEW YORK, May 27.—The coolest person in the court room, Dorothy Sautman of Toronto, Canada, was arraigned today in the homicide court on a charge of shooting Samuel Brown, a wealthy garage owner, who was slain in a Broadway hotel early with Sunday morning. Her counsel asked for a week's adjournment and she was held without bail.

The girl, whose identity was for the first time disclosed, made an attractive figure in court. Her blonde, boy-cut bobbed hair curled fashionably over her cheeks and she wore a smart little frock with champagne colored stockings and black sandals. She gave her

"That assistance should be given to the German miners is not alone in their interest, but in the interest of all European workers, especially the Belgian and French miners. It is to be hoped that they will co-operate with the British miners to help the locked-out men on the Ruhr. I believe that the matter will be dealt with at Vienna with all the forces at the command of the International."

A demonstration of 5,000 people on Tower Hill, London, yesterday (in support of the Six Point Charter for the unemployed) passed a resolution expressing support of the German miners.

ST. JOHN'S, NEWFOUNDLAND, MONDAY, JUNE 9th., 1924.

Hickman Executive Resigns

At noon today Hon. A. E. Hickman and the Members of his Executive tendered their resignations to His Excellency the Governor, who thereupon called upon Mr. W. S. Monroe to form a ministry. We understand that the new cabinet will be sworn in at Government House this afternoon, but as this had not been done up to press hour we were, of course, unable to get Mr. Monroe's slate authentically.

Rumour has, however, been keeping up to time and the incoming executive has been settled by the man on the street. So far as we have been able to gather the Monroe cabinet will consist of twelve members, as follows:—Prime Minister and Minister of Education, Hon. W. S. Monroe; Minister of Justice and Attorney General, Hon. W. J. Higgins; Colonial Secretary, Hon. J. R. Bennett; Minister of Finance & Customs, Hon. Sir J. C. Crosbie; Minister of Posts & Telegraphs, Hon. W. W. Woodford; Minister of Agriculture & Mines, Hon. W. J. Walsh; Minister of Marine & Fisheries, Hon. W. C. Winsor; Ministers without portfolio, Hons. A. B. Morine, J. J. Long, M. S. Sullivan, Rd. Cramm and R. Gordon Bradley. Mr. C. E. Russell is mentioned for the Ministry of Public Works without an executive seat.

Rumour further has it that Mr. Morine will be leader of the Government in the Upper House, that Mr. C. J. Fox will be Speaker and Mr. J. C. Puddester, Chairman of Committees in the House of Assembly.

Whether or not the new Government will line up in the above order remains to be seen.

Forget-Me-Not July 1st

July 1st is the day set apart by Act of Parliament as Commemoration Day. The Day when Church and State unite to pay tribute to the memories of Newfoundland's brave and glorious dead. This year it will be upheld in an especial manner; a National Memorial, erected by a grateful people will be unveiled by Field-Marshal Haig. At the hour of unveiling it is hoped to have all traffic suspended and every head bowed throughout the Dominion in commemoration of these gallant gentlemen whose mortal remains are buried in the country where they fell or in some uncharted grave in the sea. To refreshen the minds of the public generally it has been thought advisable to have some outward sign for the occasion, so the G. W. V. A., with its usual foresight in such matters have adopted the idea of wearing a FORGET-ME-NOT.

This small and appropriate floral tribute will be worn by all true Newfoundlanders on Commemoration Day. It cannot fail to bring back the remembrance of those loyal and true citizens of Newfoundland who were not found wanting when the Call came.

Remember them by standing still for the allotted two minutes and wear a FORGET-ME-NOT to show that you appreciate the Sacrifice which they were called upon to make.

The organization for the distribution of FORGET-ME-NOTS has been undertaken by Mrs. W. B. Fraser, P.O. Box 812, St. John's, who is making every effort to ensure that they will be worn by everyone in the Dominion on July 1st.

A London Letter

BY PANTON HOUSE
(For The Canadian Press.)

LONDON, May 9.—One of the chief attractions of the British Empire Exhibition during six weeks of July and August will be a pageant of Empire, to be produced in the great Stadium. Each complete performance will take three days. Thousands of actors will appear, including a battery of Horse Artillery, a squadron of cavalry, and two companies of infantry, who will be in camp near the Exhibition grounds. Music for the Pageant has been supplied by Sir Edward Elgar, and the spoken matter by Mr. Rudyard Kipling.

Visitors from Canada and Newfoundland will be specially interested in the first section of the pageant, which opens with the departure of Cabot from Bristol. Ten scenes are devoted to the story of Newfoundland, from the landing of Cabot, the establishment of the first permanent Colony, the period of the "fishing Admirals" and that of the Naval Governors, down to the granting of responsible government in 1855. Other episodes are the laying of the Atlantic cable (1858); the crinoline ball on the occasion of King Edward's visit as Prince of Wales (1859); the first Transatlantic Flight and wireless communication, the introduction of the paper and pulp mills at Grand Falls, and fishing, mining and sporting scenes.

The Pageant of Canada shows the discovery of the Dominion by Cartier, the first permanent occupation by the French, Wolfe, and Montcalm on the Plains of Abraham, the wars of 1812-15, the beginning of the Confederation, and the development of the West; with a round-up of horse thieves by the Mountain Police.

In the second section we are to see Queen Elizabeth going in State to St. Paul's, to a thanksgiving service for the destruction of the Armada; Drake's fleet in the Mediterranean; and early days in India and South Africa.

The third section opens with a pageant of the Heroes of the Navy, Army and Air Forces; the stories of Australia and New Zealand follow; and the final spectacle shows groups from the Dominions, and Colonies, and India, around the figure of the Mother Land.

Delights of Hampton Court

Gardeners from overseas, on a visit to London this summer, should make a point of visiting Hampton Court Palace—a favorite outdoor resort of Londoners. We say an outdoor resort, because the lovely gardens and parks stand higher in our affections than the picture galleries and State Apartments, though these too are popular. Even the Royal Botanic Gardens at Kew have nothing better to show than Hampton Court's great herbaceous border, which is every amateur gardener's ideal. The Pond Garden, at which one peers through "windows" in a wall of greenery, is perfect of its kind, and for seven or eight months in the year the beds in the well-kept lawns are filled with masses of flowers. Recently a charming little "knot-garden" has been added, replacing one, that disappeared long ago, known to have been laid out for Cardinal Wolsey. Intertwining "knots"—that is, bows—are carried out in old-fashioned herbs, such as thyme, lavender, basil and marjoram, outlining beds of equally old-fashioned flowers.

Old London Church Tower as Club

The old tower of St. Mary Somerset, in Upper Thames Street, has been redecorated, furnished, and opened as a restaurant for women workers in the city. A church has stood on this site since the 12th century. Stow, the London historian, of whom we wrote a few weeks ago, speaks of it as "a proper church, but the Summer's hithe (wharf) of some old man's name that was owner of the ground adjoining." The church that Stow knew was burnt down in the Great Fire of 1666 and was rebuilt by Sir Christopher Wren. In 1871 it was pulled down, all but the Tower, which for over 50 years has stood neglected and forlorn, but is now entering on a new and useful lease of life.

Spring Cleaning in the Abbey

Visitors now renewing their acquaintance with Westminster Abbey are remarking on the beauties that have come to light within the last few years. An artist-expert, Mr. J. R. Quennell, has been at work for some three years, restoring all manner of monuments and decorations long obscured by London dirt. Until he took it in hand, the Coronation Chair (made for Edward I. by Master Walter of Durham) was completely black, but now the original gilding can be seen, and the birds and foliage painted on the oak more than 600 years ago. His first task was the cleaning of the tomb of Edmund Crouchback, Earl of Lancaster, who died in 1296. This is considered one of the most beautiful monuments in the Abbey, and under Mr. Quennell's skilful hands has revealed its long-hidden gilding and the coloring of its heraldic shields. The gates of Henry VIII's chapel, of early 16th century work, are now receiving his attention.

London's Rag Fair

A weekly institution in Islington, North London, is the Caledonian Market, when all kinds of goods, mostly second-hand, are displayed on stalls in the open air. It is said to be the largest market of its kind in the world. On a fine day there may be as many as 1,800 stall-holders, and anything from 50,000 to 60,000 customers. In future this market is to be held twice a week. All manner of stories are told of valuable antiques, discovered by collectors and bought for a song, and prosperous people hunting such things are reported to attend, disguised in the most respectable clothe—which probably do not deceive the sharp-eyed stall-holders in the least.

Beys' Inconspicuousness

Saves Life of Chum Who Sent "Death Note"

Because Jimmy Pierce of Belmar, N.J., prematurely opened his chum's "death note," John Brown, sixteen, a sophomore in the Asbury Park High School, is alive with nothing more serious than a bullet wound in a hip.

Pierce received a note Saturday from Brown with the inscription: "Do not open until 9 o'clock Sunday night." The boy knew his friend was subject to frequent fits of depression and, after debating with himself until Sunday, opened the note.

"If you have followed out my desires," it read, "when you read this I will be dead or dying. My remains will be found at the spot on the map. I have no friends except you and am so lonesome that I must go. I really am not wanted anywhere. I am always in the way. So I depart. I hope you will remember me."

Without telling his parents, Pierce hurried to Avon, J. Brown's home, and from the map his chum had enclosed with the note found him on a beach near Zuzi's pavilion. As he hastened toward him Pierce saw his friend press a revolver against his body and pull the trigger. The boy rushed for a physician. Brown was taken to the Ann May Hospital at Spring Lake, where he is recovering.

OBITUARY

GEORGE F. MOORE

HEART'S CONTENT, June 8.—The community of Heart's Content was profoundly shocked on Sunday morning, to hear of the sudden death of one of its most esteemed and respected citizens in the person of George F. Moore at the comparatively early age of 47 years. On Saturday afternoon he left the cable office apparently in good health, but about 7.30 p.m. was stricken with paralysis on the street whilst proceeding homewards, and the end came a few hours later. Mr. Moore was for many years postmaster and manager of the Savings Bank in this town and in these capacities proved a most obliging official. In 1917 he accepted a position as accountant with the Western Union Cable Company at Heart's Content, continuing in the service of the above corporation until his untimely end. For his meritorious services during the Great War, as Secretary-Treasurer of the Heart's Content Branch of the Patriotic Association, he was created M.B.E. He was ever to the front as a church worker and always ready to help the sick and distressed. He leaves a wife and four children, several brothers and a sister and a wide circle of relatives to mourn their sad loss. His co-workers on the cable staff will miss his cheery smile and good comradeship. He was a prominent member of the S. U. F. L. O. A. and I.O.F. societies, all of whom will be the poorer for the loss of a good brother and wise counsellor.

Police Court

Two drunks and disorderlies arrested Saturday night, were fined $5.00. Michael Oliver, a city carpenter, aged 44, for the larceny of a gold watch and chain valued at $175.00, the property of Thomas Nash, was sentenced to six months imprisonment. Three assault cases were withdrawn. Several smuggling cases set down for today were further postponed.

OBITUARY

Mr. Richard Goodridge, Waterford Bridge Road, passed out of life quite suddenly this morning at 7 o'clock. The news of his death will be learned with genuine regret by the whole community.

Canada Might Let Britain Fight Her Next War Alone

NEW YORK.—Canada would not be bound to back up a war undertaken by Britain to enforce the Lausanne Treaty should one ever be declared, is the New York Sun's interpretation of the significance of Premier King's action in declining to submit the treaty to Parliament for ratification, on the ground that Canada had no part in its making.

The Sun says: "It is a good many years since Rudyard Kipling made Canada sing:

'Daughter am I of my mother's house
'But mistress in my own.'
The imperial bard was at that time very enthusiastic about 'Our Lady of the Snows.' It is hardly likely that he finds very great reason to rejoice in her behavior since she began to assert that, if she is to send men to fight the Empire's battles, she must have a say in British foreign policy. That assertion came after she realized what the great war had cost her in blood and treasure. To it may be traced her representations against a renewal of the Anglo-Japanese Treaty a few years ago; to it also the now prevalent practice under which the Dominions are consulted on all treaties negotiated by Downing street. Thus the so-called rum running treaty with this country was submitted to all the Dominions for ratification.

"Canada has been asked to agree to ratification of the Lausanne Treaty and has refused. Her Prime Minister Mackenzie King, has declined to submit the pact to the Ottawa Parliament on the ground that Canada was not represented at Lausanne. He does not, however, specifically repudiate it, but if his action has any practical significance it must be that he would not regard Canada as bound to back up a war undertaken by Britain to enforce it, if such a war may be regarded as possible.

"British pessimists see in this sort of action a forecast of their Empire's end. They agree ruefully that the Dominions must have the privileges they claim. The Dominions on their side assert that they do not insist on these privileges through and desire to shirk their imperial duties but because they conceive it is one of those duties to shoulder a share of the responsibility for Britain's foreign policy.

"What the international effect of a Dominion's disclaiming responsibility for an essential feature of that policy remains to be seen. It is hardly likely, for instance, that a dissenting Dominion would declare itself neutral

In a war where the Mother Country or another Dominion was involved. But the acknowledgment of its theoretical right to do so would mark a great historical change. And that acknowledgment seems to be the next logical step in the Empire's development. "In the case of the Irish Free State, however, the treaty setting it up provided that, in case of war, the Free State must allow the British Government such 'harbor and other facilities' as it might need for the defence of both Britain and Ireland. The right of neutrality there is not likely to be conceded."

Presbyterian General Assembly of Canada Meets To-day

BUDGET ESTIMATES FOR 1925
TOTAL $1,800,000.

OWEN SOUND, Ont., June 9. (By the Canadian Press)—Despite the "prevalence of difficult financial conditions and of customs that do not contribute to the high ideals of life and service, honesty is still the outstanding characteristic of Canadian business men," says the annual report of the General Board of the Presbyterian Church in Canada, as presented to the General Assembly here today. The report, however, says that general concern is felt by Canadian Presbyterianism "in regard to the Lord's Day." Reports received by the Board from various parts of the country "deplore the tendency to make that day a day of selfish pleasure."

The General Board, which is charged with financial responsibility for the missionary, educational and benevolent work of the Church, recommends to the General Assembly budget estimates for 1925 totalling $1,800,000.

The report pays tribute to the loyalty and liberality of the people and their abiding interest in the things of the Church. The financing of the work was rendered unusually difficult by prevailing industrial and domestic conditions. Nevertheless it is creditable to the Church that the Budget revenue exceeded the expenditures by $30,000 and it was possible to reduce by this amount the accumulated indebtedness on the Common Budget Fund, says the report.

"It is noted that the givings of congregations for 1923 exceeded those of 1922 by $17,000," the report continues. "It must not, however, be forgotten that this slight improvement in the financial situation is due in a considerable measure to the curtailment of the work. This involved the closing of mission fields and the reduction of the staff of workers. Retrenchment to the extent of $100,000 in a single year is sure to result in spiritual loss to thousands of people."

"The total amount received from all sources for the maintenance of the missionary, educational and benevolent work of the Church, including both the Budget and the Women's Missionary Societies, was more than two million dollars. It is, also, noteworthy that the Budget givings of congregations in 1923 exceeded those of 1915 by 56%, while the cost of doing the same volume of work had increased approximately 75%."

ESTIMATES

"The Board recommends to the General Assembly that the Budget estimates for 1925 be fixed at $1,800,000, apportioned to the various funds as follows:—

Home Missions and Social Service	$857,000
Foreign Missions	557,000
Colleges:
Halifax	21,000
Montreal	10,000
Queen's	9,000
Knox	22,500
Manitoba	19,000
Saskatoon	19,000
Robertson	9,000
Westminster Hall	8,000
Missionary and Deacons
Training Home	10,000
Point-aux-Trembles	25,000
Sabbath Schools & Y. P. Societies	40,000
Aged and Infirm Ministers' Fund	54,000
Widows' & Orphans' Fund (West)	45,000
Widows' & Orphans' Fund (East)	2,000
Bursary	2,500
General Expenses	99,000
Total	$1,800,000

THE BUDGET PLAN

"The Budget Plan adopted by the Church has met with real success. The chief concern of this plan of finance is not only with organization and method, but with the human need that underlies the budget system and demands its more efficient operation; and then with the sense of spiritual responsibility and the possession of spiritual power, which will move our whole people to minister to that need with deeper love and larger faith."

PROMOTION WORK.

"The year 1923 was a year of unusual effort in missionary information and education, and more than 1200 congregations were specially visited by representatives of the Board of the Church. Vigorous steps are also being made for 1924. It is expected that these will culminate in a concerted effort in every congregation in the autumn months to supplement the weekly receipts and actually raise the Budget allocation. It is, also, suggested that there be associated with this effort a week of praying and self-denial, designated to call forth the sacrificial loyalty of the Church and secure relief from the present critical situation."

CHURCH LIFE AND WORK.

"The General Board, also, has concern for the faith and order, the life and work of the church. The most significant feature in connection with this during the past year was the guiding given in a series of studies in co-operation with the Congregational and Methodist Churches on the 'General theme of 'The Spirit of Jesus in the Early Church.' Those who have followed this course during the past two years pronounce the policy invaluable to both ministers and people as contributing towards continuity and constructive thinking and as encouraging the habit of personal and social study of the Scriptures."

"The answers to the questionnaires on 'The Church in Relation to the Community' were informing and stimulating. Despite the prevalence of difficult financial conditions and customs that do not contribute to high ideals of life and service, honesty is still an outstanding characteristic of our business men. It is pointed out that the Church is becoming increasingly a centre of community life. General concern is felt in regard to the Lord's Day and the reports re-echo the tendency to make that day a day of selfish pleasure. Tribute is paid to the fine bands of workers in many congregations, who show great devotion and personal sacrifice. On the other hand, emphasis is laid on the undeveloped resources of money, mind and heart in many of the congregations of the Church."

Life Service.

"The Life Service Committee has sought during the year to place special emphasis on the application of life service ideals to all kinds of life work. Life service topics have formed part of the programmes for boys and girls and young people in the local Church and also in the boys' and girls' Conference, Summer Schools, Camps and Young Peoples' Rallies. The Committee, in co-operation with the Religious Education Council of Canada, has also been seeking closer co-operation between the Churches and student organizations. The point of emphasis for the coming year will be on the training for service of volunteer lay-workers and will be on the training for service lay-workers and the provision of necessary courses for such training."

Statistics.

"The returns show an increase of pastoral charges and elders. The number of families in the Church now stands at 211,705, an increase of 968 over the previous year. Members in full communion number 374,951, an increase of 48% in the last five years. The total revenue for all purposes exceeded $9,000,000."

To Be Displayed in Museum

The skull of Clover, now in process of mounting at the American Museum of Natural History, soon will be placed on public exhibition there. It has not been decided whether the skeleton of the fifty-three-year-old horse will be mounted, but the skull at least is going at once to the "head of the class" in equine osteology at the museum."

Its nearest competitor in point of age among the specimens in the "class," according to S. H. Chubb, who is preparing the skull for exhibition, is the skull of Wellington, a horse which lived to the age of forty-two. Mr. Chubb is assistant curator of the department of comparative anatomy."

"A distinctive feature of the skull of Clover," Mr. Chubb said, "is its extremely elongated muzzle, which indicates extreme age. The teeth are in excellent condition, and all the bones are in a practically perfect state. It is a beautiful specimen."

Clover, owned thirty-six years by the Rev. Dr. Uriah Myers, a retired Lutheran pastor of Catawissa, Pa., died April 26. Two years ago, when his owner found himself unable because of poverty to care for the horse longer, The World told of his plight and as a result generous contributions were made which enabled Clover to pass his last days in comfort. After his death Dr. Myers presented the body to the Museum of Natural History."

FORWARD MOVEMENT PEACE THANK-OFFERING.

"The total receipts for the Forward Movement Peace Thank-Offering during the years 1919 to 1923, were

$4,159,762, or about 80% of the amount subscribed. The money has been used, and is now being received, has been distributed among the various Funds participating in those objects for which it was given, the Peace Thank-Offerings, and the It has proved of the utmost value in

Poincare Makes Late Proposals About The Ruhr

Agrees to Military Evacuation Under Specified Conditions.

STAND RELATED.

Announcement to British Premier Can not Help Him Now.

PARIS, May 16.—Premier Poincare has sent Prime Minister MacDonald a letter in which he agrees to military evacuation of the Ruhr.

It is in the form of a polite reply to the British Premier's note releasing M. Poincare from his engagement to confer at Chequers, but it develops into an attempt by M. Poincare, now that it is too late, to ease up on his Ruhr policy.

M. Poincare declares in the letter he is prepared to withdraw French soldiers from the Ruhr as soon as the Germans show their good faith in acceptance of the reparations experts' plan by bonding the railways for eleven billion gold marks and industry for five billion, as the plan provides.

The letter has not yet been published in Paris, but it is evidently M. Poincare's intention to release it for publication to show he is not to stubborn as he seemed. With France in her present frame of mind, it will do him little good. It will deliver him to the attacks of newspapers supporting the Left bloc, which beat him these papers have so far left him alone.

The text of the letter begins with a regretful explanation the Premier will not be able to meet Mr. MacDonald in view of the French election results, but it expresses the belief the two ministers could have come to an agreement easily.

M. Poincare declared his acceptance of the experts' plan was through. He was prepared when he met the British Premier on May to accept the British view, even to the extent of agreeing to withdraw all soldiers from the Ruhr. He only asked delay, he says, until the Germans showed active acceptance also by issuing bonds and thus creating a pledge as valuable as the Ruhr.

It already has been known the French Premier was prepared to bargain with Mr. MacDonald over economic evacuation of the Ruhr.

His letter reveals, however, that

Vaccine War on Germs Is Planned By Irish Surgeon

Doctors and scientists long thought that the white corpuscles in the blood made war on disease germs by actually attacking them and even devouring them. Sir Almroth Wright, the famous Dublin surgeon, in a lecture to students at St. Mary's Hospital, London, proved his theory to be only partly correct.

He has invented a method by which it is possible to see that the white corpuscles kill the invading germs without even coming into direct contact with them, by emitting a secretion that meets them and arrests their development in colonies.

He demonstrated this with a lantern slide picture of blood. The disease germs were seen in a thick colony at one end, and the white corpuscles were massed at the other. In between the two was what Sir Almroth termed the "No Man's Land," a tract supplied by the white corpuscles, wherein not a single disease germ was able to flourish.

Germ disease in the future, said Sir Almroth Wright, will not be treated by ordinary medicines in their early stages, but by special therapeutic methods based on bacteriological tests. He has discovered a method by which it is possible to ascertain by blood tests, at the outset of a disease, the exact dose of vaccine necessary.

Mr. MacDonald's conversation with Premier Theunis of Belgium must also have considered terms on which the French and Belgians would consent to military evacuation as well.

It was stated sometime ago that London bankers demanded withdrawal of the troops if the loan to Germany was to be a success, but there has been no intention previous to this letter that M. Poincare was ready to acquiesce and this intimation comes after his defeat.

ADVERTISE IN THE "ADVOCATE"

THE DANCE CRAZE IS DYING OUT

HALIFAX, N. S., June 6th.—"The dance craze is dying in its birthplace—Broadway," declares a United States newspaper and in an article of some length proves the statement, pointing out that "Like any other fever it waxed to heights of delirium and then began to wane. It is waning so rapidly that it has virtually vanished—has petered out for lack of material on which to feed."

What is true of New York is true of Halifax, says the Mail, and every large dance proves it anew. In fact one Halifaxian even goes so far as to declare that the drink habit would not have spread so rapidly among the women and girls of Halifax had they not been bored to extinction by the effort to keep on enjoying dances. "Drinking too will die out," asserts a Halifax young woman who has followed the crowd in the search for thrills, "because it has ceased to be considered at all devilish or original, and men instead of being intrigued by the girl who likes an occasional 'nip' now calculate it as an added expense to 'rushing' her. It costs them enough for the extra cigarettes without the drinks as well. Carrying your own flask has lost its excitement too."

House and Barn Destroyed By Fire

At eight o'clock yesterday morning a house, annex, and barn, owned and occupied by a man named Simms on the Cove Road were completely destroyed by fire. The fire was caused by Mr. Simms' eight year old child, who overturned a lamp which soon made the whole place a mass of flames. The house was demolished and the flames spreading soon had ignited the barn which was only a short distance away. This too was razed to the ground, and in the flames a horse perished. Mr. Simms was unable to do anything to save his property, which was rapidly destroyed. The total loss is estimated at $2500.00 and only a small amount of insurance was carried on the property.

Barely Escaped Poisoning

Mr. Fred Collins, son of William Collins of Carmanville had a narrow escape from poisoning on Saturday afternoon. The man was on board his schooner at the wharf of Messrs. Vardy and not feeling well he went to the medicine chest to get a stimulant. Taking up a bottle which he thought contained what he required, he took a drink, but discovered that he had imbibed methylated spirits. For a time the man was in a bad state, and several doctors were telephoned for but were not at home. Eventually he was taken to McMurphy's drug store, where restoratives were applied until the arrival of a doctor. He is now fully recovered.

Celebrates Golden Wedding

HALIFAX, N.S., June 3.—(Canadian Press)—Yesterday the golden wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Archibald was celebrated. Mr. Archibald, formerly President of the Bank of Nova Scotia, was married fifty years ago in New York, when his bride's father, Sir Edward Mortimer Archibald was British Consul there. They came at once to Halifax where they lived their whole married life. They are prominent socially and have twice entertained British princes at their home on Inglis Street.

[Mrs. Archibald was born in this city, when her father, the Hon. Edward Mortimer Archibald, was Attorney General, later becoming British Consul in New York.]

New AmericanConsul Arrives

American Vice Consul Hartnett has received a message from Consul General Winslow, stating that he has been granted an additional 60 days leave of absence, but in view of the passage of the Rogers Bill which provides for the retirement of Consul officers over the age of 65, it is extremely unlikely that Mr. Winslow will return to St. John's. In the meantime Vice Consul and Clerk Geo. H. Barringer has been transferred from Campbelltown, N.B., to this post, and will arrive by to-day's express. Mr. Barringer is accompanied by his wife and child.

Guard of Honour

The appeal of the G. W. V. A. issued a few days ago to ex-Members of the Royal Newfoundland Regiment, to voluntarily form Guard to receive Field Marshal Earl Haig on his arrival in this Dominion, has been responded to by 50 men. As several practices are necessary to ensure smooth execution in drill movements, it is hoped that 50 other ex-Members of the Regiment will hand in their names to the G. W. V. A. office immediately.

Eric Chafe has assumed command of the Guard, and with the help and co-operation of men who will form the party, it is safe to assume that the Haig Guard will maintain the Regiment's reputation.

Full Service Dress, which includes Tunics, Trousers, Puttees, Caps, Numerals, Badges, etc., have been specially imported at a cost of $1800.00. One hundred Ross rifles are also at the G. W. V. A. Headquarters to equip the Guard, whose dress will be critically correct. More Volunteers please.

To-night's Game

The contesting teams in to-night's football game are the Cadets and C. I. B. The former team is practically the same as last year, when they won the championship, and great hopes are held out by their supporters that they can do the same this year. The following is the line-up:—

R. Walsh, goal; E. Kavanagh, J. Brown, backs; J. Canning, M. Maddigan, J. Reardigan, halves; M. Flynn, W. Caul, Walter Callahan, R. Meaney, W. Callahan, forwards.

We have been unable to secure the C. L. B. line-up, but it is understood that any new players will make their appearance and much hope is held out for their success in the fixtures.

The Rosalind arrived at Halifax 7 a.m. to-day.

Disastrous Fire Narrowly Averted

On Saturday afternoon, Mr. Alan Driscoll of the Franklin's Agencies was just in time to save the oil store of that firm from being destroyed by fire. Noticing smoke issuing from the building he rushed in and found that some person or persons had started a blaze by setting fire to some straw that had been put in a box, apparently for that purpose. Entry to the building evidently had been gained by a hole in the door. The police are now investigating.
